

A success story that started by word of mouth...

Lee Cartwright started his computer business in March 2004. Initially working from home for friends and family, he became so busy he decided to set up a business from home and making home visits to customers.

Lee has had a severe stammer every since he can remember, school, he said was a nightmare, he was given no consideration and made to stand up in front of other pupils and made to read out to class.

He was always keen on computers, the nature of which was working alone with his PC, and this course of interest proved to be a lifeline for Lee. Doing all his initial research on the computer, he set up business and is delighted with its success.

His popularity spread by word of mouth and soon he had so much work in place he needed to find bigger premises and moved onto the Trading Estate in October 2006.

Offering a repair service in your home or business he will do a collect and return service. "We aim to provide a complete computer service says Lee, "resolving software problems, remove viruses or spyware and install new hardware components.

Lee places value on every customer, ranging from domestic computer users to large business clients, and each one can expect to receive the same high standard of friendly customer care.
